

Pan-Africanist Movements in Tunisia: Challenges and Opportunities in the Early 21st Century

Amira Belkacem^{1,2}, Salma El Gazzar^{3,4}, Mazen Bouguerra^{5,6}, Omar Benzaali⁷

¹ Department of Research, Tunis Business School (TBS)

² Department of Research, University of Carthage

³ Department of Interdisciplinary Studies, Tunis Business School (TBS)

⁴ Department of Interdisciplinary Studies, University of Tunis

⁵ Tunis Business School (TBS)

⁶ National Center of Science and Technology (CNST)

⁷ University of Carthage

Published: 28 November 2007 | Received: 25 August 2007 | Accepted: 10 November 2007

Correspondence: abelkacem@outlook.com

DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.18854931

Author notes

Amira Belkacem is affiliated with Department of Research, Tunis Business School (TBS) and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

Salma El Gazzar is affiliated with Department of Interdisciplinary Studies, Tunis Business School (TBS) and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

Mazen Bouguerra is affiliated with Tunis Business School (TBS) and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

Omar Benzaali is affiliated with University of Carthage and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

Abstract

{ "background": "Pan-Africanism has been a significant ideological force in African history, particularly during the early 1900s when figures like Marcus Garvey and Kwame Nkrumah espoused its principles. In Tunisia, Pan-Africanist movements have emerged as a response to both internal socio-economic challenges and external influences such as globalization and migration patterns.", "purposeandobjectives": "This policy analysis seeks to examine the current state of Pan-Africanism in Tunisia, identifying key challenges faced by these movements and exploring potential opportunities for growth. The study aims to contribute to policy discussions on how best to support Pan-Africanist initiatives within a broader context of African development.", "methodology": "The research employs a qualitative approach, analysing existing literature on Pan-Africanism in Africa, focusing specifically on Tunisia. Data is sourced from scholarly articles, government reports, and interviews with key stakeholders involved in Pan-Africanist activities.", "findings": "Pan-Africanist movements in Tunisia face significant challenges related to funding and community engagement, with only a minority of the population actively participating in these groups. However, there are emerging themes around digital platforms as potential avenues for greater outreach and inclusivity.", "conclusion": "Despite ongoing challenges, Pan-Africanism remains an important force in contemporary Tunisian society, particularly among younger generations who see it as a means to assert cultural identity and resist assimilationist pressures. These movements have the potential to drive socio-economic development when adequately supported.", "recommendations": "To foster sustainable growth, policymakers should consider investing in digital infrastructure to enhance connectivity and participation within

Pan-Africanist networks. Additionally, initiatives aimed at building bridges between traditional leadership structures and new digital platforms could prove beneficial.", "keywords": "Pan-Africanism, Tunisia, Socio-economic Development, Digital Platforms, Community Engagement", "contributionstatement": "This study offers a nuanced understanding of the current landscape of Pan-Africanist movements in Tunisia, highlighting both their enduring relevance and the innovative strategies needed to harness their

Keywords: Pan-Africanism, Pan-African Conference, Decolonization, Grassroots Movements, Identity Politics, Migration Studies, Postcolonial Theory

ABSTRACT-ONLY PUBLICATION

This is an abstract-only publication. The complete research paper with full methodology, results, discussion, and references is available upon request.

✉ REQUEST FULL PAPER

Email: info@parj.africa

Request your copy of the full paper today!

SUBMIT YOUR RESEARCH

Are you a researcher in Africa? We welcome your submissions!

Join our community of African scholars and share your groundbreaking work.

Submit at: app.parj.africa

Scan to visit app.parj.africa

Open Access Scholarship from PARJ

Empowering African Research | Advancing Global Knowledge