ABSTRACT

This article examines Public Works Programmes and Social Protection in African States with a focused emphasis on Guinea within the field of Energy. It is structured as a mixed methods study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Public Works Programmes, Public Works, Works Programmes, Social Protection, African States, Public

Article Highlights

- Examines Public Works Programmes as social protection mechanisms in African states
- Focuses on Guinea with specific attention to energy sector dynamics
- Employs mixed methods to analyse institutional and policy frameworks
- Provides practical conclusions linked to transparent fiscal governance

Methodological Approach

Mixed methods study combining quantitative analysis ($Y = \beta_0 + \beta_1X_1 + \beta_2X_2 + \epsilon$) with qualitative assessment of institutional settings in Guinea.

This article foregrounds African context-specific insights for energy and social policy.
