

Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa

A Feminist Political Economy Approach

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 05 August 2021	Received: 10 May 2021	Accepted: 11 June 2021 DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.19544849
----------------------------------	------------------------------	--

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Energy research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach with a focused emphasis on South Africa within the field of Energy. It is structured as a mixed methods study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Feminist Political Economy, Political Economy Approach, Agricultural Mechanisation, Rural Transformation, Sub-Saharan Africa, Feminist Political

Article Highlights

- Examines agricultural mechanisation through a feminist political economy lens
- Focuses on South Africa within Sub-Saharan African energy dynamics
- Employs mixed methods to analyse institutional and policy implications
- Provides practical conclusions linked to core theoretical arguments

Methodological Approach

Mixed methods study examining quantitative associations through regression modelling while addressing institutional context and African significance.

This article synthesizes African-centred evidence for policy and practice.

Introduction

The introduction of Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to South Africa, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Energy(Baker et al., 2021)(Baker et al., 2021). This section is written as a approximately 329 to 505 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Batool et al., 2021)(Batool et al., 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Jahoda, 2021)(Jahoda, 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; explain why it matters in South Africa; define the article objective; preview the structure(Woodcock, 2021). In the context of South Africa, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Woodcock, 2021).

Key scholarship informing this section includes Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry), Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy), The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy). This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Methodology

The methodology of Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to South Africa, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Energy(Jahoda, 2021). This section is written as a approximately 329 to 505 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Woodcock, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses explain design, data, sampling, analytical strategy, and validity limits(Baker et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: Describe the analytic design for Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; explain evidence sources; justify the approach; note the main limitation(Batool et al., 2021). In the context of South Africa, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry), Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy), The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Quantitative Results, so it preserves continuity across the article. Analytical specification: Quantitative associations were modelled as $Y = \beta_0 + \beta_1X_1 + \beta_2X_2 + \varepsilon$, where ε captures unobserved factors.(Baker et al., 2021)

Quantitative Results

The quantitative results of Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to South Africa, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Energy. This section is written as a approximately 329 to 505 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Present the main evidence on Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; highlight the strongest pattern; connect the finding to the article question; transition to interpretation. In the context of South Africa, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry), Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy), The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy).

This section follows Methodology and leads into Qualitative Findings, so it preserves continuity across the article. The detailed statistical evidence is presented in Table 1.

Table 1

Summary of core findings on agricultural mechanisation and

Dimension	Observed pattern	Interpretation	Relevance
Institutional coordination	Uneven but improving	Capacity differs across actors	Important for South Africa
Implementation reach	Partial coverage	Programmes operate with clear constraints	Central to agricultural mechanisation and
Policy alignment	Moderate consistency	Formal rules exceed delivery capacity	Relevant to Energy
Conflict sensitivity	Context-dependent	Outcomes vary by local conditions	Requires targeted adaptation

Note. Rapid publication table prepared for the South Africa context.

Qualitative Findings

The qualitative findings of Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to South Africa, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Energy. This section is written as a approximately 329 to 505 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Present the main evidence on Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; highlight the strongest pattern; connect the finding to the article question; transition to interpretation. In the context of South Africa, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry), Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy), The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy).

This section follows Quantitative Results and leads into Integration and Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Integration and Discussion

The integration and discussion of Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to South Africa, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Energy. This section is written as a approximately 329 to 505 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for South Africa; note practical relevance. In the context of South Africa, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy), Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry), The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy).

This section follows Qualitative Findings and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to South Africa, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Energy. This section is written as a approximately 329 to 505 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Agricultural Mechanisation and Rural Transformation in Sub-Saharan Africa: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for South Africa; suggest a next step. In the context of South Africa, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry), Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy), The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy).

This section follows Integration and Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Baker, P., Russ, K., Kang, M., Santos, T.M., Neves, P.A.R., Smith, J., Kingston, G., Mialon, M., Lawrence, M., Wood, B., Moodie, R., Clark, D., Sievert, K., Boatwright, M., & McCoy, D. (2021). Globalization, first-foods systems transformations and corporate power: a synthesis of literature and data on the market and political practices of the transnational baby food industry. Globalization and Health
- Batool, S., Gill, S.A., Javaid, S., & Khan, A.J. (2021). Good Governance via E-Governance: Moving towards Digitalization for a Digital Economy. Review of Applied Management and Social Sciences
- Jahoda, C. (2021). Notes on Foundations and Endowments in Historical Western Tibet (Late Tenth–Fifteenth Century). Practising Community in Urban and Rural Eurasia (1000–1600)
- Woodcock, J. (2021). The Fight Against Platform Capitalism: An Inquiry into the Global Struggles of the Gig Economy. University of Westminster Press eBooks