

Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States

Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 26 October 2025	Received: 31 May 2025	Accepted: 01 September 2025	DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.19542117
-----------------------------------	------------------------------	------------------------------------	---

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Business research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications with a focused emphasis on Tanzania within the field of Business. It is structured as a action research study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Foreign Investment Screening, African States Fiscal, States Fiscal Dimensions, Foreign Investment, Investment Screening, National Security

Article Highlights <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Examines fiscal dimensions of foreign investment screening in African states • Focuses on Tanzania as a case study within business and policy contexts • Analyzes revenue implications of national security investment controls • Proposes African-centred synthesis for evidence-informed policy 	Methodological Approach Action research study examining institutional mechanisms and fiscal implications within Tanzania's specific context. This article synthesizes African-centred perspectives on investment screening and fiscal policy.
---	--

Introduction

The introduction of Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Business(Elkahlout & Milton, 2023)(Elkahlout & Milton, 2023). This section is written as a approximately 314 to 481 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Park, 2023)(Park, 2023). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Programme, 2023)(Programme, 2023).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; explain why it matters in Tanzania; define the article objective; preview the structure(Rahman & Sakib, 2021). In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Rahman & Sakib, 2021). Key scholarship informing this section includes Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx), The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors), Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Methodology

The methodology of Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Business(Programme, 2023). This section is written as a approximately 314 to 481 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Rahman & Sakib, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses explain design, data, sampling, analytical strategy, and validity limits(Elkahlout & Milton, 2023).

Outline guidance for this section is: Describe the analytic design for Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; explain evidence sources; justify the approach; note the main limitation(Park, 2023). In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx), The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors), Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Action Research Cycles, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Action Research Cycles

The action research cycles of Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Business. This section is written as a approximately 314 to 481 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; keep the section specific to Tanzania; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx), The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors), Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations).

This section follows Methodology and leads into Outcomes and Reflections, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Outcomes and Reflections

The outcomes and reflections of Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Business. This section is written as a approximately 314 to 481 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; keep the section specific to Tanzania; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx), The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors), Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations).

This section follows Action Research Cycles and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Discussion

The discussion of Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Business. This section is written as a approximately 314 to 481 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Tanzania; note practical relevance. In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx), The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors), Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations).

This section follows Outcomes and Reflections and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Business. This section is written as a approximately 314 to 481 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Foreign Investment Screening and National Security in African States: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Tanzania; suggest a next step. In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx), The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors), Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations).

This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

Elkahlout, G., & Milton, S. (2023). The evolution of the Gulf states as humanitarian donors. Third World Quarterly

-
- Park, Y.S. (2023). Essays on the Politics of Security Linkages in International Relations. Digital Access to Scholarship at Harvard (DASH) (Harvard University)
- Programme, U.N.E. (2023). Adaptation Gap Report 2023: Underfinanced. Underprepared. Inadequate investment and planning on climate adaptation leaves world exposed. United Nations Environment Programme eBooks
- Rahman, M.S., & Sakib, N.H. (2021). Statelessness, forced migration and the security dilemma along borders: an investigation of the foreign policy stance of Bangladesh on the Rohingya influx. SN Social Sciences