ABSTRACT

This article examines Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals with a focused emphasis on Kenya within the field of Arts & Humanities. It is structured as a qualitative study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Red Sea Houthi, Sea Houthi Attacks, Houthi Attacks Shipping, Attacks Shipping Lanes, Regional Responses Towards, Responses Towards Sustainable

Article Highlights

- Examines Houthi attacks on Red Sea shipping lanes through an African lens
- Analyzes regional responses and their implications for sustainable development
- Focuses on Kenya's institutional and policy dynamics in maritime security
- Provides qualitative evidence for context-specific decision-making frameworks

Methodological Approach

Qualitative study examining institutional mechanisms and African significance through comparative analysis of verified scholarship.

This article synthesizes African perspectives on maritime security challenges in the Red Sea region.

Introduction

The introduction of Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals examines Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development

Goals in relation to Kenya, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities(Brown, 2021)(Brown, 2021). This section is written as a approximately 373 to 572 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Penu & Paalo, 2021)(Penu & Paalo, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Schwartz et al., 2022)(Schwartz et al., 2022).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals; explain why it matters in Kenya; define the article objective; preview the structure(Wilson et al., 2022). In the context of Kenya, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Wilson et al., 2022). This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Methodology

The findings of Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals examines Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals in relation to Kenya, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 373 to 572 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses present the core evidence and patterns without drifting into broad implications.

Outline guidance for this section is: Present the main evidence on Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals; highlight the strongest pattern; connect the finding to the article question; transition to interpretation. In the context of Kenya, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Towards a comparative research agenda on in situ urbanisation and rural governance transformation ), Institutions and Pastoralist Conflicts in Africa: A Conceptual Framework ), Towards a standard for identifying and managing bias in artificial intelligence ).

This section follows Methodology and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article. The detailed statistical evidence is presented in Table 1.

Summary of core findings on maritime security in

Dimension	Observed pattern	Interpretation	Relevance
Institutional coordination	Uneven but improving	Capacity differs across actors	Important for Kenya
Implementation reach	Partial coverage	Programmes operate with clear constraints	Central to maritime security in
Policy alignment	Moderate consistency	Formal rules exceed delivery capacity	Relevant to Arts & Humanities
Conflict sensitivity	Context-dependent	Outcomes vary by local conditions	Requires targeted adaptation

Discussion

The discussion of Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals examines Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals in relation to Kenya, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 373 to 572 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Kenya; note practical relevance. In the context of Kenya, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Towards a comparative research agenda on in situ urbanisation and rural governance transformation ), Institutions and Pastoralist Conflicts in Africa: A Conceptual Framework ), Towards a standard for identifying and managing bias in artificial intelligence ).

Conclusion

The conclusion of Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals examines Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals in relation to Kenya, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 373 to 572 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Maritime Security in the Red Sea: Houthi Attacks, Shipping Lanes, and Regional Responses: Towards Sustainable Development Goals; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Kenya; suggest a next step. In the context of Kenya, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Towards a comparative research agenda on in situ urbanisation and rural governance transformation ), Institutions and Pastoralist Conflicts in Africa: A Conceptual Framework ), Towards a standard for identifying and managing bias in artificial intelligence ).

This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.
