ABSTRACT

This article examines Public Sector Innovation in African Governments: Pilots, Scaling, and Political Dynamics: A Critical Examination with a focused emphasis on Egypt within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a policy analysis article that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Public Sector Innovation, African Governments Pilots, Governments Pilots Scaling, Public Sector, Sector Innovation, African Governments

Article Highlights

- Examines innovation pilots and scaling in African public sectors
- Focuses on political dynamics and institutional mechanisms
- Uses Egypt as a case study within broader African context
- Links analysis to practical policy implications

Methodological Approach

Policy analysis framework examining institutional dynamics, verified scholarship, and analytical implications specific to African governance contexts.

This article synthesizes evidence from multiple disciplines to inform governance practice.
