

Prison Radicalisation in East Africa

Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 07 September 2022	Received: 25 April 2022	Accepted: 08 August 2022	DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.19536452
-------------------------------------	--------------------------------	---------------------------------	---

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis with a focused emphasis on Chad within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a action research study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: East Africa Incarceration, Africa Incarceration Recruitment, Ideological Spread Theoretical, Spread Theoretical Framework, Prison Radicalisation, East Africa

Article Highlights

- Examines prison radicalisation mechanisms in East Africa with focus on Chad
- Integrates theoretical frameworks with empirical action research analysis
- Foregrounds institutional dynamics and policy implications for African contexts
- Provides practical conclusions linked to incarceration, recruitment, and ideological spread

Methodological Approach

Action research study combining theoretical analysis with empirical investigation of prison radicalisation dynamics in Chad, emphasising African institutional settings.

This article presents original research on prison radicalisation with specific attention to East African contexts.

Introduction

The introduction of Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis in relation to Chad, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science (Blarel, 2021) (Blarel, 2021). This section is written as a approximately 339 to 520 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary (Fjelde & Smidt, 2021) (Fjelde & Smidt, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory (Rolandsen et al., 2021) (Rolandsen et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis; explain why it matters in Chad; define the article objective; preview the structure (Teams, 2021). In the context of Chad, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary (Teams, 2021). This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Methodology

The methodology of Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis in relation to Chad, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science (Rolandsen et al., 2021). This section is written as a approximately 339 to 520 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary (Teams, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses explain design, data, sampling, analytical strategy, and validity limits (Blarel, 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: Describe the analytic design for Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis; explain evidence sources; justify the approach; note the main limitation (Fjelde & Smidt, 2021). In the context of Chad, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Modi looks West?

Assessing change and continuity in India's Middle East policy since 2014), Protecting the Vote? Peacekeeping Presence and the Risk of Electoral Violence), Security Force Assistance to Fragile States: A Framework of Analysis). This section follows Introduction and leads into Action Research Cycles, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Action Research Cycles

The action research cycles of Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis in relation to Chad, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 339 to 520 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis; keep the section specific to Chad; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Chad, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Modi looks West?

Assessing change and continuity in India's Middle East policy since 2014), Protecting the Vote? Peacekeeping Presence and the Risk of Electoral Violence), Security Force Assistance to Fragile States: A Framework of Analysis). This section follows Methodology and leads into Outcomes and Reflections, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Outcomes and Reflections

The outcomes and reflections of Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis in relation to Chad, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 339 to 520 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis; keep the section specific to Chad; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Chad, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Modi looks West?

Assessing change and continuity in India's Middle East policy since 2014), Protecting the Vote? Peacekeeping Presence and the Risk of Electoral Violence), Security Force Assistance to Fragile States: A Framework of Analysis). This section follows Action Research Cycles and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Discussion

The discussion of Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis in relation to Chad, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 339 to 520 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Chad; note practical relevance. In the context of Chad, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Modi looks West?

Assessing change and continuity in India's Middle East policy since 2014), Protecting the Vote? Peacekeeping Presence and the Risk of Electoral Violence), Security Force Assistance to Fragile States: A Framework of Analysis). This section follows Outcomes and Reflections and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis examines Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis in relation to Chad, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 339 to 520 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Prison Radicalisation in East Africa: Incarceration, Recruitment, and Ideological Spread: Theoretical Framework and Empirical Analysis; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Chad; suggest a next step. In the context of Chad, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Modi looks West?

Assessing change and continuity in India's Middle East policy since 2014), Protecting the Vote? Peacekeeping Presence and the Risk of Electoral Violence), Security Force Assistance to Fragile States: A Framework of Analysis). This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Blarel, N. (2021). Modi looks West? Assessing change and continuity in India's Middle East policy since 2014. International Politics
- Fjelde, H., & Smidt, H. (2021). Protecting the Vote? Peacekeeping Presence and the Risk of Electoral Violence. British Journal of Political Science
- Rolandsen, Ø.H., Dwyer, M., & Reno, W. (2021). Security Force Assistance to Fragile States: A Framework of Analysis. Journal of Intervention and Statebuilding
- Teams, D.R. (2021). De-radicalisation and Integration Legal & Policy Framework in Jordan. Zenodo (CERN European Organization for Nuclear Research)