

Policy Implications of Legal Research in Egypt's African Context: An Action Study

Amira Fakhry¹, Ahmed El-Qadi^{1,2}

¹ Zagazig University

² National Research Centre (NRC), Cairo

Published: 06 October 2007 | Received: 04 May 2007 | Accepted: 29 August 2007

Correspondence: afakhry@gmail.com

DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.18859969

Author notes

Amira Fakhry is affiliated with Zagazig University and focuses on Law research in Africa.

Ahmed El-Qadi is affiliated with National Research Centre (NRC), Cairo and focuses on Law research in Africa.

Abstract

Egypt is a significant African country where legal research can offer valuable insights into broader African contexts. An action study was conducted involving interviews with key stakeholders, document analysis, and qualitative thematic coding. The findings highlight a significant proportion (45%) of Egyptian laws that align closely with international human rights standards, suggesting potential for harmonization in other African jurisdictions. Action research has revealed substantial policy implications from Egypt's legal landscape, particularly regarding alignment with global human rights norms. Policy-makers should consider integrating these findings into national legislative processes to enhance compliance and efficacy of laws.

Keywords: African geopolitics, legal anthropology, participatory evaluation, jurisprudence studies, indigenous knowledge systems, qualitative methodology, governance structures

ABSTRACT-ONLY PUBLICATION

This is an abstract-only publication. The complete research paper with full methodology, results, discussion, and references is available upon request.

✉ REQUEST FULL PAPER

Email: info@parj.africa

Request your copy of the full paper today!

SUBMIT YOUR RESEARCH

Are you a researcher in Africa? We welcome your submissions!

Join our community of African scholars and share your groundbreaking work.

Submit at: app.parj.africa

Scan to visit app.parj.africa

Open Access Scholarship from PARJ

Empowering African Research | Advancing Global Knowledge