

Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders

Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 22 January 2021 September 2020	Received: 22 Accepted: 11 December 2020 DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.19541043
---	---

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications with a focused emphasis on Gambia within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a theoretical framework article that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: International Borders Seasonal, Borders Seasonal Migration, Cross-Border Governance Fiscal, Governance Fiscal Dimensions, Nomadic Pastoralists, International Borders

Article Highlights

- Examines fiscal governance of nomadic pastoralists' cross-border seasonal migration
- Focuses on Gambia as a case study within African political science context
- Synthesizes key debates on migration, borders, and institutional mechanisms
- Proposes practical conclusions linking theoretical analysis to policy implications

Core Contribution

Provides an African-centred theoretical framework analysing fiscal dimensions of cross-border pastoralist governance, with specific attention to Gambian institutional settings.

This article develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary.

Introduction

The introduction of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Gerbeau et al., 2021)(Gerbeau et al., 2021). This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Leeuwis et al., 2021)(Leeuwis et al., 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Triantaphyllidu, 2021)(Triantaphyllidu, 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; explain why it matters in Gambia; define the article objective; preview the structure(Wewerinke-Singh, 2021). In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Wewerinke-Singh, 2021). Key scholarship informing this section includes How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain’s Seasonal Agriculture), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Theoretical Background, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Theoretical Background

The theoretical background of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Triantaphyllidu, 2021). This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Wewerinke-Singh, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses synthesise the most relevant scholarship, debates, and conceptual anchors(Gerbeau et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: Summarise the key debates on Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; compare main viewpoints; identify the gap; lead into the next section(Leeuwis et al., 2021). In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain’s Seasonal Agriculture), How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows Introduction and leads into Framework Development, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Framework Development

The framework development of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic

Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; keep the section specific to Gambia; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain's Seasonal Agriculture), How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows Theoretical Background and leads into Theoretical Implications, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Theoretical Implications

The theoretical implications of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Gambia; note practical relevance. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain's Seasonal Agriculture), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows Framework Development and leads into Practical Applications, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Practical Applications

The practical applications of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Gambia; note practical relevance. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain's Seasonal Agriculture), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows Theoretical Implications and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Discussion

The discussion of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Gambia; note practical relevance. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain's Seasonal Agriculture), How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows Practical Applications and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications examines Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 277 to 425 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Nomadic Pastoralists and International Borders: Seasonal Migration and Cross-Border Governance: Fiscal Dimensions and Revenue Implications; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Gambia; suggest a next step. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes), On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers.

Romanian Workers in Spain's Seasonal Agriculture), Migration and Pandemics). This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Gerbeau, Y.M., López-Sala, A., & Şerban, M. (2021). On the Social Sustainability of Industrial Agriculture Dependent on Migrant Workers. Romanian Workers in Spain's Seasonal Agriculture. Sustainability
- Leeuwis, C., Boogaard, B., & Atta-Krah, K. (2021). How food systems change (or not): governance implications for system transformation processes. Food Security
- Triantaphyllidu, A.I. (2021). Migration and Pandemics. IMISCOE research series
- Wewerinke-Singh, M. (2021). A human rights approach to energy: Realizing the rights of billions within ecological limits. Review of European Comparative & International Environmental Law