Abstract

Pan-Africanism has been a significant concept in African Studies for decades, emphasising unity and solidarity among African peoples across the continent. A theoretical framework approach is employed to analyse existing literature on Pan-Africanism within Senegalese society. This study underscores the importance of understanding Pan-Africanism as a dynamic force that can adapt to contemporary socio-political contexts while maintaining its core principles. Further research should focus on developing practical strategies to enhance Pan-Africanist initiatives in Senegal, taking into account local cultural and political dynamics.
