

John Garang's Vision

New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 24 September 2024
Received: 24 May 2024

Accepted: 27 August 2024
DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.19536305

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Arts & Humanities research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan with a focused emphasis on South Sudan within the field of Arts & Humanities. It is structured as a theoretical framework article that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: John Garang s, Garang s Vision, s Vision New, Vision New Sudan, New Sudan Liberation, Sudan Liberation Theology

Article Highlights

- Examines Garang's synthesis of liberation theology and political theory
- Foregrounds African-centred approaches to state-building
- Analyzes institutional dynamics in South Sudan's context
- Links theoretical frameworks to practical policy implications

African-Centred Synthesis

This study advances evidence-informed practice through context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making in African political development.

This article provides a theoretical framework for understanding Garang's political vision in contemporary South Sudan.

Introduction

The introduction of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities (Alwan et al., 2023) (Alwan et al., 2023). This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary (Biks et al., 2024) (Biks et al., 2024).

Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Ramnund-Mansingh & Reddy, 2021)(Ramnund-Mansingh & Reddy, 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; explain why it matters in South Sudan; define the article objective; preview the structure(Rodgers, 2021). In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Rodgers, 2021).

Key scholarship informing this section includes Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study), South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability). This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Theoretical Background, so it preserves continuity across the article. The detailed statistical evidence is presented in Table 1.

Table 1

Summary of core findings on john garang s

Dimension	Observed pattern	Interpretation	Relevance
Institutional coordination	Uneven but improving	Capacity differs across actors	Important for South Sudan
Implementation reach	Partial coverage	Programmes operate with clear constraints	Central to john garang s
Policy alignment	Moderate consistency	Formal rules exceed delivery capacity	Relevant to Arts & Humanities
Conflict sensitivity	Context-dependent	Outcomes vary by local conditions	Requires targeted adaptation

Note. Rapid publication table prepared for the South Sudan context.

Theoretical Background

The theoretical background of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities(Ramnund-Mansingh & Reddy, 2021). This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Rodgers, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses synthesise the most relevant scholarship, debates, and conceptual anchors(Alwan et al., 2023).

Outline guidance for this section is: Summarise the key debates on John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; compare main viewpoints; identify the gap; lead into the next section(Biks et al., 2024). In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study), South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Framework Development, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Framework Development

The framework development of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; keep the section specific to South Sudan; connect it to the wider article. In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability), Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study).

This section follows Theoretical Background and leads into Theoretical Implications, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Theoretical Implications

The theoretical implications of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for South Sudan; note practical relevance. In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study), South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability).

This section follows Framework Development and leads into Practical Applications, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Practical Applications

The practical applications of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for South Sudan; note practical relevance. In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study), South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability).

This section follows Theoretical Implications and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Discussion

The discussion of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for South Sudan; note practical relevance. In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study), South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability).

This section follows Practical Applications and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan examines John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan in relation to South Sudan, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Arts & Humanities. This section is written as a approximately 319 to 489 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on John Garang's Vision: New Sudan, Liberation Theology, and Political Imagination: Evidence from South Sudan; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for South Sudan; suggest a next step. In the context of South Sudan, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries), In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study), South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability).

This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Alwan, A., Majdzadeh, R., Yamey, G., Blanchet, K., Hailu, A., Jama, M., Johansson, K.A., Musa, M.Y.A., Mwalim, O., Norheim, O.F., Safi, N., Siddiqi, S., & Zaidi, R. (2023). Country readiness and prerequisites for successful design and transition to implementation of essential packages of health services: experience from six countries. BMJ Global Health
- Biks, G.A., Shiferie, F., Tsegaye, D., Asefa, W., Alemayehu, L., Wondie, T., Seboka, G., Hayes, A., RalphOpara, U., Zelalem, M., Belete, K., Donofrio, J., & Gebremedhin, S. (2024). In-depth reasons for the high proportion of zero-dose children in underserved populations of Ethiopia: Results from a qualitative study. Vaccine X

-
- Ramnund-Mansingh, A., & Reddy, N. (2021). South African specific complexities in aligning graduate attributes to employability. Journal of Teaching and Learning for Graduate Employability
- Rodgers, C. (2021). Community engagement in pastoralist areas: Lessons from the public dialogue process for a new refugee settlement in Turkana, Kenya. Pastoralism Research Policy and Practice