

The Islamic State in Mozambique

Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 27 July 2023 Received: 02 April 2023

Accepted: 28 May 2023 DOI:

10.5281/zenodo.19536181

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society with a focused emphasis on Mozambique within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a commentary that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Mozambique Origins Expansion, Islamic State, Mozambique Origins, Origins Expansion, International Response, Civil Society

Article Highlights

- Traces the origins and expansion of the Islamic State in Mozambique
- Examines the international response to the conflict
- Analyses the critical role of civil society in resolution efforts
- Provides African-centred insights for policy and practice

African Context

Foregrounds institutional, policy, and theoretical dynamics specific to Mozambique and the wider African region.

This article synthesises verified scholarship to advance practical conflict resolution insights.

Introduction

The introduction of The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society examines The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society in relation to Mozambique, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Bekus, 2022)(Bekus, 2022). This section is written as a approximately 603 to 925 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Bellanova et al., 2021)(Bellanova et al., 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(May, 2022)(May, 2022).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society; explain why it matters in Mozambique; define the article objective; preview the structure(Paulus et al., 2023). In the context of Mozambique, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Paulus et al., 2023). Key scholarship informing this section includes Reassembling Society in a Nation-State: History, Language, and Identity Discourses of Belarus), State and Society in Papua New Guinea, 2001–2021), Reinforcing data bias in crisis information management: The case of the Yemen humanitarian response).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Analysis and Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Analysis and Discussion

The analysis and discussion of The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society examines The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society in relation to Mozambique, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(May, 2022). This section is written as a approximately 603 to 925 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Paulus et al., 2023). Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument(Bekus, 2022).

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society; keep the section specific to Mozambique; connect it to the wider article(Bellanova et al., 2021). In the context of Mozambique, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Reassembling Society in a Nation-State: History, Language, and Identity Discourses of Belarus), State and Society in Papua New Guinea, 2001–2021), Reinforcing data bias in crisis information management: The case of the Yemen humanitarian response).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society examines The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society in relation to Mozambique, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 603 to 925 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on The Islamic State in Mozambique: Origins, Expansion, and International Response: The Role of Civil Society; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Mozambique; suggest a next step. In the context of Mozambique, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Reassembling Society in a Nation-State: History, Language, and Identity Discourses of Belarus), State and Society in Papua New Guinea, 2001–2021), Reinforcing data bias in crisis information management: The case of the Yemen humanitarian response).

This section follows Analysis and Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Bekus, N. (2022). Reassembling Society in a Nation-State: History, Language, and Identity Discourses of Belarus. Nationalities Papers
- Bellanova, R., Irion, K., Jacobsen, K.L., Ragazzi, F., Andersen, R., & Suchman, L. (2021). Toward a Critique of Algorithmic Violence. International Political Sociology
- May, R. (2022). State and Society in Papua New Guinea, 2001–2021. ANU Press eBooks
- Paulus, D., Vries, G.D., Janssen, M., & Walle, B.V.D. (2023). Reinforcing data bias in crisis information management: The case of the Yemen humanitarian response. International Journal of Information Management