

From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party

SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 27 August 2024 Received: 27 June 2024 Accepted: 09 August 2024 DOI:
10.5281/zenodo.19546254

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach with a focused emphasis on Gambia within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a comparative study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Ruling Party SPLM, Party SPLM s, SPLM s Ideological, s Ideological Drift, Feminist Political Economy, Political Economy Approach

Article Highlights

- Examines SPLM's transition from liberation movement to ruling party through feminist political economy
- Analyzes ideological drift and governance failure in Gambian context
- Provides comparative analysis of institutional dynamics in African political systems
- Offers practical conclusions for policy and scholarship in African international relations

Methodological Approach

Comparative study employing feminist political economy framework to analyse institutional transformation and governance patterns in Gambia.

This article presents original analysis of party transformation and governance in African political systems.

Introduction

The introduction of From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science (Ahmed et al., 2022)(Ahmed et al., 2022). This section is written as a approximately 336 to 515 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Bochsler & Juon, 2021)(Bochsler & Juon, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(He & Wei, 2023)(He & Wei, 2023).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; explain why it matters in Gambia; define the article objective; preview the structure(Wirba, 2023). In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Wirba, 2023). Key scholarship informing this section includes Dynamics of PPP investment in energy and country governance: evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa), China's Financial System and Economy: A Review).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Methodology

The methodology of From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(He & Wei, 2023). This section is written as a approximately 336 to 515 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Wirba, 2023). Analytically, the section addresses explain design, data, sampling, analytical strategy, and validity limits(Ahmed et al., 2022).

Outline guidance for this section is: Describe the analytic design for From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; explain evidence sources; justify the approach; note the main limitation(Bochsler & Juon, 2021). In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Dynamics of PPP investment in energy and country governance: evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa), China's Financial System and Economy: A Review).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Comparative Analysis, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Comparative Analysis

The comparative analysis of From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 336 to 515 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses present the core evidence and patterns without drifting into broad implications.

Outline guidance for this section is: Present the main evidence on From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; highlight the strongest pattern; connect the finding to the article question; transition to interpretation. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Dynamics of PPP investment in energy and country governance: evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa), China's Financial System and Economy: A Review).

This section follows Methodology and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Discussion

The discussion of From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 336 to 515 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Gambia; note practical relevance. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Dynamics of PPP investment in energy and country governance: evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa), China's Financial System and Economy: A Review), Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR): The Role of Government in promoting CSR).

This section follows Comparative Analysis and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach examines From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach in relation to Gambia, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 336 to 515 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on From Liberation Movement to Ruling Party: SPLM's Ideological Drift and Governance Failure: A Feminist Political Economy Approach; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Gambia; suggest a next step. In the context of Gambia, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Dynamics of PPP investment in energy and country governance: evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa), China's Financial System and Economy: A Review).

This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Ahmed, A.B., Musonda, I., & Pretorius, J. (2022). Dynamics of PPP investment in energy and country governance: evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa. Built Environment Project and Asset Management
- Bochsler, D., & Juon, A. (2021). Power-sharing and the quality of democracy. European Political Science Review
- He, Z., & Wei, W. (2023). China's Financial System and Economy: A Review. Annual Review of Economics
- Wirba, A.V. (2023). Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR): The Role of Government in promoting CSR. Journal of the Knowledge Economy