Article Highlights

- Examines cooperative governance dynamics in Egypt's political science context
- Analyzes member democracy, management, and financial accountability linkages
- Explores implications for regional integration in African settings
- Presents survey-based evidence with methodological rigor

Methodological Note

Sample size determined using standard proportion formula: $n = (Z^2 \times p(1-p)) / d^2$, ensuring statistical validity for the Egyptian case study.

Focuses on institutional mechanisms and African significance rather than generic commentary.
