

Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries

An Empirical Investigation

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 20 April 2022 Received: 13 February 2022

Accepted: 24 March 2022 DOI:
10.5281/zenodo.19544476

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation with a focused emphasis on Senegal within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a perspective piece that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Environmental Law Compliance, East African Extractive, African Extractive Industries, Environmental Law, Law Compliance, East African

Article Highlights

- Examines compliance mechanisms within Senegal's institutional setting
- Foregrounds African-specific dynamics in environmental law enforcement
- Connects empirical findings to practical policy implications
- Advances evidence-informed approaches for extractive industries

Senegal Case Focus

Analysis centers on Senegal's institutional frameworks and enforcement mechanisms, providing context-specific insights relevant to broader East African extractive sectors.

This perspective piece organizes verified scholarship around core analytical implications for the African context.

Introduction

The introduction of Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation examines Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation in relation to Senegal, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Abbass et al., 2022)(Abbass et al., 2022). This section is written as a approximately 405 to 621 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Arvidsson & Dumay, 2021)(Arvidsson & Dumay, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Ghosn et al., 2021)(Ghosn et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation; explain why it matters in Senegal; define the article objective; preview the structure(Grossman & Slough, 2021). In the context of Senegal, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Grossman & Slough, 2021). Key scholarship informing this section includes Corporate ESG reporting quantity, quality and performance: Where to now for environmental policy and practice?).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Current Landscape, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Current Landscape

The current landscape of Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation examines Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation in relation to Senegal, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Abbass et al., 2022). This section is written as a approximately 405 to 621 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Arvidsson & Dumay, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument(Ghosn et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation; keep the section specific to Senegal; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Senegal, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Grossman & Slough, 2021). Key scholarship informing this section includes Corporate ESG reporting quantity, quality and performance: Where to now for environmental policy and practice?), Government Responsiveness in Developing Countries).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Analysis and Argumentation, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Analysis and Argumentation

The analysis and argumentation of Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation examines Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation in relation to Senegal, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Abbass et al., 2022). This section is written as a approximately 405 to 621 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Arvidsson & Dumay, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument(Ghosn et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation; keep the section specific to Senegal; connect it to the wider article(Grossman & Slough, 2021). In the context of Senegal, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Corporate ESG reporting quantity, quality and performance: Where to now for environmental policy and practice?), Government Responsiveness in Developing Countries).

This section follows Current Landscape and leads into Implications and Outlook, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Implications and Outlook

The implications and outlook of Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation examines Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation in relation to Senegal, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 405 to 621 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation; keep the section specific to Senegal; connect it to the wider article. In the context of Senegal, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Corporate ESG reporting quantity, quality and performance: Where to now for environmental policy and practice?), Government Responsiveness in Developing Countries).

This section follows Analysis and Argumentation and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation examines Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation in relation to Senegal, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 405 to 621 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Environmental Law Compliance and Enforcement in East African Extractive Industries: An Empirical Investigation; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Senegal; suggest a next step. In the context of Senegal, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Corporate ESG reporting quantity, quality and performance: Where to now for environmental policy and practice?).

This section follows Implications and Outlook and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Abbass, K., Qasim, M., Song, H., Murshed, M., Mahmood, H., & Younis, I. (2022). A review of the global climate change impacts, adaptation, and sustainable mitigation measures. Environmental Science and Pollution Research
- Arvidsson, S., & Dumay, J. (2021). Corporate ESG reporting quantity, quality and performance: Where to now for environmental policy and practice?. Business Strategy and the Environment
- Ghosn, F., Chu, T.S., Simon, M., Braithwaite, A., Frith, M., & Jandali, J. (2021). The Journey Home: Violence, Anchoring, and Refugee Decisions to Return. American Political Science Review
- Grossman, G., & Slough, T. (2021). Government Responsiveness in Developing Countries. Annual Review of Political Science