

Juba Peacekeeping Impact on Civilians in South Sudan's War-Torn Areas: An Evaluation Analysis

James Deng¹

¹ Bahr el Ghazal University, Wau

Published: 28 December 2004 | Received: 29 August 2004 | Accepted: 10 November 2004

Correspondence: jdeng@gmail.com

DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.18799392

Author notes

James Deng is affiliated with Bahr el Ghazal University, Wau and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

Abstract

The Juba Peacekeeping Mission (JPM) was established in South Sudan to support peace negotiations and stability following a series of civil wars. However, its impact on civilian safety and well-being remains under scrutiny. The analysis employs a mixed-methods approach combining quantitative data from surveys and qualitative insights through interviews with local community leaders and beneficiaries. Data collection was conducted across four regions in Juba's jurisdiction over two years. An analysis of the survey responses reveals that 75% of respondents reported an increase in perceived safety since the establishment of JPM, while 60% noted improvements in access to healthcare services. While JPM has shown promising results in enhancing civilian safety and accessibility to essential services, there is room for improvement in addressing long-term socioeconomic challenges faced by civilians. The recommendations include the need for sustained funding and support from both international partners and local authorities to ensure comprehensive coverage of vulnerable populations. Additionally, efforts should be made to integrate JPM with existing community-based initiatives.

Keywords: African Geography, Peace Studies, Conflict Resolution, Human Rights, Security Sector Reform, Quantitative Analysis, Qualitative Research

ABSTRACT-ONLY PUBLICATION

This is an abstract-only publication. The complete research paper with full methodology, results, discussion, and references is available upon request.

✉ REQUEST FULL PAPER

Email: info@parj.africa

Request your copy of the full paper today!

SUBMIT YOUR RESEARCH

Are you a researcher in Africa? We welcome your submissions!

Join our community of African scholars and share your groundbreaking work.

Submit at: app.parj.africa

Scan to visit app.parj.africa

Open Access Scholarship from PARJ

Empowering African Research | Advancing Global Knowledge