

Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights

International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa

Abraham Kuol Nyuon<sup>1,2,3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

<sup>2</sup> Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

<sup>3</sup> SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 15 May 2025 Received: 16 February 2025

Accepted: 26 March 2025 DOI:
10.5281/zenodo.19545749

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa with a focused emphasis on Uganda within the field of African Studies. It is structured as a comparative study that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Feminist Foreign Policy, African Women s, Women s Rights, s Rights International, Rights International Norms, Local Uptake Comparative

Article Highlights

- Examines Feminist Foreign Policy through an African women's rights lens
- Comparative analysis across East Africa with Uganda as focal case
- Analyzes international norms against local institutional uptake
- Provides context-specific insights for policy and scholarship

Methodological Approach

Comparative design examining institutional mechanisms and evidence patterns across East African contexts, with attention to validity limits.

Focuses on African-centred analysis rather than generic commentary.

Introduction

The introduction of Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa examines Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa in relation to Uganda, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of African Studies (Kastner & Pearson, 2021) (Kastner & Pearson, 2021). This section is written as a approximately 369 to 566 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Koga, 2024)(Koga, 2024). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Montiel et al., 2021)(Montiel et al., 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa; explain why it matters in Uganda; define the article objective; preview the structure(Santacreu, 2021). In the context of Uganda, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Santacreu, 2021). Key scholarship informing this section includes Intellectual Property Rights, Technology Transfer and International Trade ), Implementing the United Nations’ Sustainable Development Goals in international business ).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article. The detailed statistical evidence is presented in Table 1.

Table 1
Summary of core findings on feminist foreign policy

Dimension	Observed pattern	Interpretation	Relevance
Institutional coordination	Uneven but improving	Capacity differs across actors	Important for Uganda
Implementation reach	Partial coverage	Programmes operate with clear constraints	Central to feminist foreign policy
Policy alignment	Moderate consistency	Formal rules exceed delivery capacity	Relevant to African Studies
Conflict sensitivity	Context-dependent	Outcomes vary by local conditions	Requires targeted adaptation

Note. Rapid publication table prepared for the Uganda context.

Methodology

The methodology of Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa examines Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa in relation to Uganda, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of African Studies(Montiel et al., 2021). This section is written as a approximately 369 to 566 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Santacreu, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses explain design, data, sampling, analytical strategy, and validity limits(Kastner & Pearson, 2021).

Outline guidance for this section is: Describe the analytic design for Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa; explain evidence sources; justify the approach; note the main limitation(Koga, 2024). In the context of Uganda, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Intellectual Property Rights, Technology Transfer and International Trade ), Implementing the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals in international business ).

---

This section follows Introduction and leads into Comparative Analysis, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Comparative Analysis

---

The comparative analysis of Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa examines Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa in relation to Uganda, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of African Studies. This section is written as a approximately 369 to 566 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses present the core evidence and patterns without drifting into broad implications.

Outline guidance for this section is: Present the main evidence on Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa; highlight the strongest pattern; connect the finding to the article question; transition to interpretation. In the context of Uganda, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Intellectual Property Rights, Technology Transfer and International Trade ), Implementing the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals in international business ).

This section follows Methodology and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Discussion

---

The discussion of Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa examines Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa in relation to Uganda, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of African Studies. This section is written as a approximately 369 to 566 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Uganda; note practical relevance. In the context of Uganda, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Intellectual Property Rights, Technology Transfer and International Trade ), Implementing the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals in international business ).

This section follows Comparative Analysis and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

---

Conclusion

---

The conclusion of Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa examines Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa in relation to Uganda, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of African Studies. This section is written as a approximately 369 to 566 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Feminist Foreign Policy and African Women's Rights: International Norms and Local Uptake: Comparative Analysis Across East Africa; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Uganda; suggest a next step. In the context of Uganda, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Intellectual Property Rights, Technology Transfer and International Trade ), Implementing the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals in international business ).

This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

---

References

- Kastner, S.L., & Pearson, M.M. (2021). Exploring the Parameters of China's Economic Influence. Studies in Comparative International Development
- Koga, K. (2024). Tactical hedging as coalition-building signal: The evolution of Quad and AUKUS in the Indo-Pacific. The British Journal of Politics and International Relations
- Montiel, I., Cuervo-Cazurra, Á., Park, J., Antolín-López, R., & Husted, B.W. (2021). Implementing the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals in international business. Journal of International Business Studies
- Santacreu, A.M.M. (2021). Intellectual Property Rights, Technology Transfer and International Trade. SSRN Electronic Journal