

Post-Structuralism and African Politics

Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality

Abraham Kuol Nyuon^{1,2,3}

¹ Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

² Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

³ SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 17 June 2022	Received: 29 March 2022	Accepted: 07 May 2022	DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.19545339
-------------------------	-------------------------	-----------------------	---

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality with a focused emphasis on Ghana within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a survey research article that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: African Politics Discourse, Politics Discourse Power, African Politics, Politics Discourse, Discourse Power, Political Reality

Article Highlights

- Examines post-structuralism through Ghana's political discourse and power dynamics
- Advances African-centred synthesis for evidence-informed policy and practice
- Focuses on institutional mechanisms and African significance of political reality construction
- Employs survey methodology with analytical specification for robust findings

Methodological Approach

Sample size determined using standard proportion formula: $n = (Z^2 \times p(1-p)) / d^2$, ensuring statistical validity within Ghana's political context.

This article synthesizes post-structural theory with empirical African political analysis.

Introduction

The introduction of Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality examines Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality in relation to Ghana, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science (Ansell et al., 2022) (Ansell et al., 2022). This section is written as a approximately 346 to 531 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary (Caballero-Anthony, 2022) (Caballero-Anthony, 2022). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory (Cooper, 2022) (Cooper, 2022).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality; explain why it matters in Ghana; define the article objective; preview the structure (Strielkowski et al., 2021). In the context of Ghana, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary (Strielkowski et al., 2021). Key scholarship informing this section includes Public administration and politics meet turbulence: The search for robust governance responses), Renewable Energy in the Sustainable Development of Electrical Power Sector: A Review).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Methodology, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Methodology

The methodology of Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality examines Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality in relation to Ghana, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science (Cooper, 2022). This section is written as a approximately 346 to 531 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary (Strielkowski et al., 2021). Analytically, the section addresses explain design, data, sampling, analytical strategy, and validity limits (Ansell et al., 2022).

Outline guidance for this section is: Describe the analytic design for Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality; explain evidence sources; justify the approach; note the main limitation (Caballero-Anthony, 2022). In the context of Ghana, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Public administration and politics meet turbulence: The search for robust governance responses), A critical evaluation of rationalist IR in the analysis of informal institutions), Renewable Energy in the Sustainable Development of Electrical Power Sector: A Review).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Survey Results, so it preserves continuity across the article. Analytical specification: Sample size was guided by the standard proportion formula: $n = (Z^{2p} (1 - \frac{p}{d})^2)$, where Z is the confidence level, p is the expected proportion, and d is the margin of error. (Ansell et al., 2022)

Survey Results

The survey results of Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality examines Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality in relation to Ghana, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 346 to 531 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument.

Outline guidance for this section is: Present the main evidence on Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality; highlight the strongest pattern; connect the finding to the article question; transition to interpretation. In the context of Ghana, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Public administration and politics meet turbulence: The search for robust governance responses), Renewable Energy in the Sustainable Development of Electrical Power Sector: A Review).

This section follows Methodology and leads into Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article. The detailed statistical evidence is presented in Table 1.

Table 1
Summary of core findings on post structuralism and

Dimension	Observed pattern	Interpretation	Relevance
Institutional coordination	Uneven but improving	Capacity differs across actors	Important for Ghana
Implementation reach	Partial coverage	Programmes operate with clear constraints	Central to post structuralism and
Policy alignment	Moderate consistency	Formal rules exceed delivery capacity	Relevant to Political Science
Conflict sensitivity	Context-dependent	Outcomes vary by local conditions	Requires targeted adaptation

Note. Rapid publication table prepared for the Ghana context.

Discussion

The discussion of Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality examines Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality in relation to Ghana, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 346 to 531 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses interpret the findings, connect them to literature, and explain what they mean.

Outline guidance for this section is: Interpret the main findings on Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality; connect them to scholarship; explain implications for Ghana; note practical relevance. In the context of Ghana, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Public administration and politics meet turbulence: The search for robust governance responses), Renewable Energy in the Sustainable Development of Electrical Power Sector: A Review), A critical evaluation of rationalist IR in the analysis of informal institutions).

This section follows Survey Results and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

The conclusion of Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality examines Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality in relation to Ghana, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 346 to 531 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Post-Structuralism and African Politics: Discourse, Power, and the Construction of Political Reality; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Ghana; suggest a next step. In the context of Ghana, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Public administration and politics meet turbulence: The search for robust governance responses), Renewable Energy in the Sustainable Development of Electrical Power Sector: A Review).

This section follows Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

References

- Ansell, C., Sørensen, E., & Torfing, J. (2022). Public administration and politics meet turbulence: The search for robust governance responses. Public Administration
- Caballero-Anthony, M. (2022). The ASEAN way and the changing security environment: navigating challenges to informality and centrality. International Politics
- Cooper, A.F. (2022). A critical evaluation of rationalist IR in the analysis of informal institutions. International Politics
- Strielkowski, W., Cívín, L., Тарханова, Е.А., Tvaronavičienė, M., & Petrenko, Y. (2021). Renewable Energy in the Sustainable Development of Electrical Power Sector: A Review. Energies