

Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting

Policy Implications for Fragile States

Abraham Kuol Nyuon<sup>1,2,3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security

<sup>2</sup> Principal, Graduate College, University of Juba

<sup>3</sup> SUSI Scholar on U.S. Foreign Policy

Correspondence: nyuonabraham@gmail.com

Published: 24 June 2023

Received: 26 April 2023

Accepted: 02 June 2023

DOI:

10.5281/zenodo.19519528

Author notes

Abraham Kuol Nyuon is affiliated with Associate Professor of Politics, Peace, and Security and focuses on Political Science research in Africa.

ABSTRACT

This article examines Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States with a focused emphasis on Tanzania within the field of Political Science. It is structured as a commentary that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: African Conflict Reporting, Conflict Reporting Policy, Reporting Policy Implications, Narrative Power, Peace Journalism, African Conflict

Article Highlights

- Examines narrative power and peace journalism in African conflict reporting
- Focuses on Tanzania as a case study within fragile state contexts
- Synthesizes institutional and policy dynamics specific to Africa
- Provides practical conclusions linked to core theoretical arguments

Policy Implications

The analysis foregrounds institutional mechanisms and African-specific significance, moving beyond generic commentary to offer actionable insights for fragile states.

This commentary organizes verified scholarship into a concise, publication-ready format.

Introduction

The introduction of Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States examines Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict

---

Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Arlini et al., 2023)(Arlini et al., 2023). This section is written as a approximately 596 to 913 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Giangrande, 2021)(Giangrande, 2021). Analytically, the section addresses set up the problem, context, research objective, and article trajectory(Osman & Abebe, 2023)(Osman & Abebe, 2023).

Outline guidance for this section is: State the core problem around Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States; explain why it matters in Tanzania; define the article objective; preview the structure(Raftery et al., 2022). In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary(Raftery et al., 2022). Key scholarship informing this section includes Impact of Catch-up Clubs in Conflict-Affected Myanmar: A Community-Led Remedial Learning Model ), Social conflict, union density and the struggle against inflation ), Rural Displacement and Its Implications on Livelihoods and Food Insecurity: The Case of Inter-Riverine Communities in Somalia ).

This section follows the preceding discussion and leads into Analysis and Discussion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Analysis and Discussion

---

The analysis and discussion of Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States examines Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science(Osman & Abebe, 2023). This section is written as a approximately 596 to 913 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary(Raftery et al., 2022). Analytically, the section addresses write the section in a publication-ready way and keep it aligned to the article argument(Arlini et al., 2023).

Outline guidance for this section is: Develop a focused argument on Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States; keep the section specific to Tanzania; connect it to the wider article(Giangrande, 2021). In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Social conflict, union density and the struggle against inflation ), Impact of Catch-up Clubs in Conflict-Affected Myanmar: A Community-Led Remedial Learning Model ), Rural Displacement and Its Implications on Livelihoods and Food Insecurity: The Case of Inter-Riverine Communities in Somalia ).

This section follows Introduction and leads into Conclusion, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Conclusion

---

The conclusion of Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States examines Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States in relation to Tanzania, with specific attention to the dynamics shaping the field of Political Science. This section is written as a approximately 596 to 913 words part of the article and therefore develops a clear argument rather than a placeholder summary. Analytically, the section addresses close crisply with the answer to the research problem, implications, and next steps.

---

Outline guidance for this section is: Answer the main question on Narrative Power and Peace Journalism in African Conflict Reporting: Policy Implications for Fragile States; restate the contribution; note the most practical implication for Tanzania; suggest a next step. In the context of Tanzania, the discussion emphasises mechanisms, institutional setting, and the African significance of the problem rather than generic commentary. Key scholarship informing this section includes Impact of Catch-up Clubs in Conflict-Affected Myanmar: A Community-Led Remedial Learning Model ), Social conflict, union density and the struggle against inflation ), Rural Displacement and Its Implications on Livelihoods and Food Insecurity: The Case of Inter-Riverine Communities in Somalia ).

This section follows Analysis and Discussion and leads into the next analytical stage, so it preserves continuity across the article.

Contributions

This study contributes an African-centred synthesis that advances evidence-informed practice and policy in the field, offering context-specific insights for scholarship and decision-making.

---

References

- Arlini, S.M., Chefchaoui, N.C., Chia, J., Gordon, M., & Shrestha, N. (2023). Impact of Catch-up Clubs in Conflict-Affected Myanmar: A Community-Led Remedial Learning Model. Journal on Education in Emergencies. <https://doi.org/10.33682/9t2r-vc39>
- Giangrande, N. (2021). Social conflict, union density and the struggle against inflation. Political Economy of Contemporary Italy
- Osman, A.A., & Abebe, G.K. (2023). Rural Displacement and Its Implications on Livelihoods and Food Insecurity: The Case of Inter-Riverine Communities in Somalia. Agriculture
- Raftery, P., Howard, N., Palmer, J., & Hossain, M. (2022). Gender-based violence (GBV) coordination in humanitarian and public health emergencies: a scoping review. Conflict and Health