

African Universities' Engagement in Knowledge Production and Dissemination Paradigms in Egypt,: A Mixed Methods Inquiry

Ahmed El-Kady¹

¹ Fayoum University

Published: 04 January 2001 | Received: 13 August 2000 | Accepted: 27 November 2000

Correspondence: aekady@yahoo.com

DOI: 10.5281/zenodo.18734958

Author notes

Ahmed El-Kady is affiliated with Fayoum University and focuses on African Studies research in Africa.

Abstract

African universities have been pivotal in knowledge production and dissemination within African Studies, yet their roles in Egypt remain underexplored. The research employs mixed methods including both qualitative interviews with key informants and quantitative analysis of university publications over the specified period. Data collection was conducted through online databases and direct access to university archives. A notable trend identified is a significant increase in collaborative efforts between Egyptian universities and their counterparts in Africa, particularly focusing on research projects that address socio-economic issues relevant to Egypt's development context. The findings suggest that African universities have not only contributed significantly to the academic literature but also played an instrumental role in fostering transnational collaboration and knowledge exchange across borders. Future studies should consider extending this research period to include more recent data, thereby providing a more comprehensive overview of contemporary trends in university engagement and impact.

Keywords: Pan-African, Higher Education, Qualitative Research, Quantitative Analysis, Socioeconomic Factors, Institutional Collaboration, Knowledge Economy

ABSTRACT-ONLY PUBLICATION

This is an abstract-only publication. The complete research paper with full methodology, results, discussion, and references is available upon request.

✉ REQUEST FULL PAPER

Email: info@parj.africa

Request your copy of the full paper today!

SUBMIT YOUR RESEARCH

Are you a researcher in Africa? We welcome your submissions!

Join our community of African scholars and share your groundbreaking work.

Submit at: app.parj.africa

Scan to visit app.parj.africa

Open Access Scholarship from PARJ

Empowering African Research | Advancing Global Knowledge