ABSTRACT

This article examines The Ethics of Foreign Intervention: Sovereignty, Human Rights, and Political Responsibility: Decolonial Reflections with a focused emphasis on Mali within the field of Sociology. It is structured as a policy brief that organises the problem, the strongest verified scholarship, and the main analytical implications in a concise publication-ready format.

The paper foregrounds the most relevant institutional, policy, or theoretical dynamics for the African context and closes with a practical conclusion linked to the core argument.

Keywords: Foreign Intervention Sovereignty, Intervention Sovereignty Human, Sovereignty Human Rights, Political Responsibility Decolonial, Responsibility Decolonial Reflections, Foreign Intervention

Article Highlights

- Examines intervention ethics through Mali's institutional and historical context
- Foregrounds African sovereignty against universalist human rights claims
- Analyses political responsibility through decolonial theoretical frameworks
- Connects sociological analysis to practical policy implications

Methodological Approach

This article employs a case study methodology focused on Mali, examining intervention dynamics through institutional analysis and decolonial theory rather than abstract ethical debate.

This analysis centers African perspectives on sovereignty while engaging with international legal frameworks.
