Abstract

Historical Foundations of Contemporary Governance Challenges in Tunisia Not applicable for this perspective piece as it is an exploratory analysis focusing on theoretical frameworks rather than empirical data collection or testing. The analysis reveals a complex interplay between past and present in Tunisia's governance challenges, emphasising the importance of integrating historical context into contemporary policy-making processes. Suggests incorporating historical education into curricula to foster greater awareness and understanding of the impacts of historical events on current conditions. Advocates for a more inclusive and participatory approach to governance that acknowledges past injustices and promotes equitable development.
